

Why Leaders should Celebrate Wins

Monday conf call 2/21/11

Mannafest 2011 Registration: March 10-12

Mannatech and NASKA Team Up to Fight Against Malnutrition Press Release

Intro:

When you or your team experiences success, what do you do? In our fast paced environment, it is easy to just move on to the next immediate task and fail to acknowledge what has been accomplished. Your specific brand: here is a chance to strengthen your own "personal leadership brand." Definition: the way others perceive, think and feel about you as a leader.

This alone can make or break your success. It impacts your image, your reputation, your relationships, your performance and your ability to retain team members as well as gain new ones.

1. Celebrating wins reminds your team to keep striving even in a poor economy.
2. Celebrating wins reminds you that a planned, focused goal setting process works
3. Celebrating wins motivates your team to continue delivering good results.
4. Celebrating wins unifies the team around a positive outcome.
5. Celebrating wins reminds the team that they work for a winning organization.
6. Celebrating wins forces you and your team to concentrate on the positive rather than the negative.
7. Celebrating wins builds momentum for you and your team.
8. Celebrating wins gets you away from mundane, day-to-day tasks.
9. Celebrating wins allows you to connect with other colleagues in a way that is not just work related.

10. Celebrating wins allows you to reward specific team members.